I am pleased to enclose the final report of the President's Commission on Privatization.

After six months of review, the Commission found that many programs and activities that are currently operated by the federal government could be more effectively managed through greater private sector involvement.

For over 40 years our nation and its people have fallen victim to the relentless and unyielding control of the federal bureaucracy...resulting in a government that has inhibited productivity and creativity in the delivery of its services.

Today, as our nation continues to grow, our society faces new challenges to which it must respond. This report is about those responses and solutions.

We believe the adoption of our 78 recommendations will make a positive difference in helping assure that the needs of our people are met.

March, 1988

David F. Linowes
Chairman
